Colored men and women, other Americans who sympathize with "poor little Selassie" and "want to protect Ethiopian civilization," should know more.

Haiti Selassie and others at the top in Ethiopia are of Arab blood, and their property is based on cruel exploitation of Negro slaves, of a race totally apart from their own.

Facts concerning Ethiopian "civilization" and SLAVEERY may interest Americans of the colored race and others.

There are in Ethiopia about two million Negro slaves, property of the upper classes. The Ethiopian of modern means rides off on his mule, a slave, barefoot, running beside him, carries the rifle of his "owner."

Many details of slavery horrors are in those English official reports printed just before Mussolini's march. Some of the reports were so horrible that the English government would not allow them to be published.

"Nobody loves a fat man," Mrs. Amy Dunbar, 60, of San Francisco, adds, "and only, 'er a fat woman either.'"

"The telephone girl was not short or fat, but that nothing to do with the trouble."

Had the telephone girl been shorter and fatter than the wife, but retaining her red hair, rosy eyes, and YOUTH, the shooting might still have occurred.

The fair one with red hair, inherited from long before the ice age, may have been just very dear friends' with Mr. Dunbar, and she may consider herself fortunate.

Poor China abandons hope for her northern territory and its 150,000,000 inhabitants that a Japan wants. China suspects Japan "plots" to force the entire Chinese nation into vassalage to Tokyo.

In his book, "Stalin," finished by Henri Barbusse just before he died, and recently published by Macmillan, the French writer, who represents the Stalin view, says Stalin believes that "one quarter of China, with 100,000,000 inhabitants, is lost."

Livermore Rallies; Mother Maps Defense

Shooting Mother "Booked"

UNDER-SHERIFF ROSS. MRS. DOROTHEA LIVERMORE (Picture from International News Photograph Service)

The charge is "suspicion of attempt to commit murder"—and being booked at Santa Barbara County Jail, Santa Barbara, Cal., is Mrs. Dorothea Livermore, former wife of Jesse Livermore, Wall Street operator. Her son, Jesse Livermore, Jr., whom police say she shot during a drinking party, is hovering between life and death. Making the entry at the jail is Under-Sheriff Jack Ross.

LIVERMORE RALLIES; UNLOADED GUN PLEAS

Santa Barbara, Cal., Dec. 2.—Winning his most serious brush with death since his "dare" wounding early Friday, Jesse Livermore, Jr., 16, rallied today from an early morning sinking spell.

Dr. Neville Under reported the son of the Wall Street speculator, who was wounded by a .22 calibre bullet, to have improved following two injections. The first was an injection of glucose to provide energy with which the blood might fight infection and the second was an injection of insulin to assist in the assimilation of the sugar by the blood.

Use of an oxygen tent continued also as the battle for the boy's life was waged. Meanwhile it appeared probable that a formal charge of assault with intent to commit murder would be filed during the day against Mrs. Dorothea Livermore, mother of the boy and divorced wife of Livermore and, as authorities moved to place a formal charge against her, she laid plans for her defense.

It was indicated that her defense would be that the shooting of her son was purely accidental. It was Continued on Page 7, Column 4

Roosevelt Fails To Hear Fire Call

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt, a 29-year member of the Hyde Park, N. Y., fire department, was out of range of fire sirens and failed to hear a fire alarm here today. A blaze in the roof of one of the frame cottages on the Warm Springs Foundation caused some excitement but it was extinguished by hastily organized volunteers.

PAY TAX RISE PROTESTS MOUNT

Proposal to tax 200,000 small wage-earners previously exempted under the state income tax law met widespread protest today.

"Let the little fellows alone," was the keynote sounded by swiftly-forming opposition.

On the other hand, favorable response was noted to certain other recommendations contained in the report of the special legislative committee on taxation.

Battle lines were forming on Beacon Hill as the proposed new tax program assumed major interest for the Legislature which convenes next month.

Public utility and race track interests, hit under the new plan, organized their attacks in secret as compared to the outspoken opposition of the champions of the small salary earners.

Without commenting on the proposal to lower income tax exemptions and "wage" the little fellow, Governor Curley said he was satisfied there were many meritorious recommendations in the program.

He requested the State Planning Board to confer with his advisory board, make an intensive study of recommendations and report to him not later than December 20. The commission proposals that he finds to be sound will be incorporated in his annual address to the Legislature, he said.

AGAWAM RACE CHECKS BAD, SATURF MEN

By Rob Ahearn
Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2.—Eleven thousand dollars, is quite a handy sum, especially if you have a string of thoroughbreds to feed and keep and families at home to support.

For youthful Alfred G. Vanderbilt or the staid Whitney families of the race track, this sum is just a drop in the bucket, something they might use to purchase a promising yearling with.

But for the Christmas family of Baltimore County it is the amount in Agawam racing and breeding Association checks alleged to have been returned to them marked worthless.

And therein lies the reason for J. Yancy Christmas' departure for Boston to seek an interview with Charles M. Crampton, president of the Massachusetts State Racing Commission, and Ben Gurnet, treasurer of the Agawam racing and breeding Association.

"I'm not out to cause any trouble," said Christmas, "but I want to see that my money is properly accounted for."

More than $2500 worth of jewelry and other articles were stolen from the Wellesley home of Harold A. Bishop, Boston book broker, over the weekend. The burglar found the jewelry in a bedroom dresser, although it had been well hidden.

Cambridge Pastor Asks Curb on Harvard Drinking

Ann Marsters' Story Tells of Students' Unchecked Gaiety

(Why have Harvard students been in so many escapades that brought unfavorable publicity recently? Miss Marsters is attempting to give a fair picture of the social life of Harvard. This is her second story. The third will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

By ANN MARSTERS
From the way the town is talking, it would seem that the life of a Harvard student is just one cocktail party after another.

Of course, that isn't true—because in the first place, Harvard students do not specialize in cocktails. They prefer Scotch and soda.

And in the second place, that is hardly fair to the innumerable Harvard boys who are diligent, hard-working students.

There will be no more brandy played in the city under official license, the mayor declared, until the city council has taken action on the report of a council committee on its investigation into alleged binge "racketeering."

TUFTS, SMITH, RADCLIFFE JOIN IN

BULLETIN
Attorney-General James A. Dyer, in his opinion given today to State Education Commissioner Payson Smith, ruled that the teachers' oath must be taken by undergraduates in private and public educational institutions who are assigned to practice teaching duties as part of their training.

Dr. Kirtley F. Mather's Harvard rebellion against the teachers' oath has spread to at least four other colleges, it was revealed today.

As a result, Dr. Mather's "conditional" oath will be only one among many self-written versions to be sent back to Massachusetts college faculty members.

The disclosure came as a series of educators throughout the state were focused on Harvard, where the climax of the anti-battle between Dr. Mather, physics professor, and state officials is expected.

Others signed by 180 professors, instructors, lecturers and teachers in public and private institutions had reached the office of State Commissioner of Education Payson Smith up to noon, with 2000 more expected.

Others WRITE THEIR OWN
First checking of the oaths revealed, the Boston Evening American learned, that many members at Tufts, Smith, Holyoke and Radcliffe had followed the lead of Dr. Mather and had written their own version of the oath.

BRITISH CABINET TAKES FRODO BAGGINS

U. S. ARMY BIG PROBLEM

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

London, Dec. 2.—The British Cabinet met today in a significant session toward enforcement of an oil embargo against Italy—a problem involving the question of European peace—or the protests of the warring Fascist nation.

The ministers were expected to take advantage of the day remaining before the December 13 meeting of the League of Nations sanctions committee to consider the possibility of a general impression that Britain would take the lead in the action.

5. POLICY QUESTIONED

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's government confronted several questions today.

- 1.—Would the United States be closing its market to Italy, should the League decide to institute the oil embargo?
- 2.—Would the Italian government consider a stoppage of oil essential for its military operations in East Africa—a form of escalation, leading to more serious implications in the already "hot" Anglo-Italian relations?
- 3.—What effect would oil sanctions have on the joint Anglo-American effort to enforce the League of Nations sanctions against Italy?

Informed sources said the ministers determined to enforce the oil embargo against all oil on the Italian coast, and to make the problem of drafting their own strategy to meet any Italian oil embargo.

Rome, Dec. 2 (AP)—Nine hundred of Italy's mothers and widows "lead" a demonstration today in Milan, protesting against the League of Nations sanctions against Italy.

The women of Italy will through their golden wedding rings to the government.

The women will offer them over the graves of Italy's war dead, or at monuments to the fallen, December 18.

That day was declared the "day of faith."

Rome, Dec. 2 (AP)—A skirmish in the Tumbian area of Ethiopia, in which 15 Ethiopians and 6 Italian soldiers were killed, was reported today in an official communique.

Thousands Welcome Selassie at War Front

With Emperor Haile Selassie at Desaya (via Adde Ababa), Dec. 2.—Emperor Haile Selassie returned today to a military route after a trip from Adde Ababa.

Thousands gathered in the sun-drenched square, where the emperor, flanked by his bodyguards, was greeted by cheering crowds.

On his way, a petty officer and a soldier were killed.

Ethiopians May Start Big Battle Tomorrow

Adde Ababa, Dec. 2 (AP)—Reports of plans for an Ethiopian offensive against the Italians in the north, near Makala, circulated here today.

It was said Emperor Haile Selassie was now in Desaya, en route to go north to meet his subjects in the field, Haile Selassie and Ras Kassa.

It was thought the attack might begin at dawn tomorrow, monthly day of the patron St. George.

It is estimated 60,000 Ethiopians are facing the Italians for the attack.

League Unaffected By Canada's Oil View

Gen. D. C. (AP)—D. W. A. Riddell, Canada's permanent representative to the League of Nations, said today he had no comment to make on the government's proposal for an oil embargo against Italy.

Riddell said he was a member of the committee, and would discuss the Canadian government's view.

Franklin D. Roosevelt Fight Aids London

Kansas Urged as Man Who Can Unite G.O.P.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Decision by Senator William R. Borah's fight to stage a battle royal with Colonel Franklin D. Roosevelt for the fifth April primary conceivably may result in the early elimination of Roosevelt as a presidential possibility, according to widespread party circles.

More important, the Senate report, is the strong probability that the Republican national convention next year will be tied up in a struggle to elect, against the famous Lewdson-Wood looting of the hat in the 1920 convention.

Warren G. Harding's name, which has been mentioned in the past, is not considered a serious possibility.

Senator Borah's fight, it is understood here, is the elimination of Roosevelt as a presidential possibility.

Landon Aloof

Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, it was learned here today, does not intend to become involved in the Kansas issue between the Borahs and the Roosevelt supporters.

Landon, it is known, intends to keep out of the controversy, but is developing pretty much over the state which holds preference for the Roosevelt supporters.

Machine Guns Guard Jonker Diamond

As 726 Carat Gem Is Put on Display Here

It looks like a chunk of frosted ice you'd drop in a high ball. But it's the Jonker diamond, weighing 726 carats and valued at $150,000.

In a bullet-proof steel and lead-lined vault, the Jonker diamond is now on display, under heavy guard of police and machine guns, at the Ritz-Carlton shop of Hodgson, Kennard and Co.

Several other diamonds of lesser but still great importance surround the Jonker "extra blue-white and pure" diamond. The Jonker diamond is the largest uncut diamond in the world.

It is estimated 60,000 Ethiopians are facing the Italians for the attack.

Further reducing the volume of sales.

For the West as for the East a growth in the volume of business, will be of lasting benefit in connection with the New Deal's dangerous experiments in price and production control.

It is in the light of this analysis that Governor Landon's candidacy can best be viewed.

He has committed himself unreservedly to a sharp reduction in expenditures and to a balanced budget. His own recovery in Kansas is an evidence of the sincerity of his intentions.

Mr. Roosevelt's similar pledge in view of his loose handling of New York financial affairs during his governorship. When men have no habits in their minds, they are not likely to be able to change them.

Views Accepted

Mr. Landon's views on the currency are no less acceptable to the West than his views on the budget. Governor Landon's popularity in the West can be taken for granted.

He is himself a westerner who has shown a keen understanding of the needs of the West and speaks its language.

Certainly he stands out today as a Republican leader who can make an aggressive campaign for the West.

Senator Borah could give him wholehearted support and so could Mr. Roosevelt.

Fiscal Management

What the taxpaying East wants, above everything else, is sound fiscal management in the government. The East wants a balanced budget and a sound currency.

What the relatively underdeveloped West wants above everything else is capital on reasonable terms and expanding markets for the products of its farms and mines.

There is no essential conflict of interest between these two sets of objectives.

As long as the spending policy of the government threatens confidence and as long as there is grave doubt regarding the future of the currency, capital will be limited and the growth of the West will be retarded.

Likewise there can be no real increase in the volume of business in the West so long as the government engages in a deliberate effort to restrict production and raises the cost of living thereby.

Controversial aspects of the program

Controversial aspects of the program were given an opinion as to its worth by a group of men in Springfield, Representative Raymond P. Chandler, declared himself completely in favor of the program.

He said he did not see the supplementary statements of his own, or setting forth that the commission should have included a tax burden on unearned income from stocks and bonds.

It is not as radical as I expected, I will have to have more time to read through the report before committing myself further.

General solution of the tax problem in this state is the sales tax, and it is a matter of time before it will be adopted.

It is proposed to "amend" $50,000 new taxpayers by lowering income exemptions from $2000 to $1500 for married persons, from $1000 to $500 for single persons.

Prankishness Blamed by Minister For Unhappy Incidents at Harvard

Debs Join In Defense Of Men

you consider that for the past six weeks Harvard has been in headlines which have involved students in unpleasant and tragic scandal. As a result, Harvard drinking, Harvard house parties and Harvard freedom dominate the scene.

And there are those who think harshly of Harvard and who declare that something should be done by Harvard authorities to alter such "going on".

The Rev. William M. Maenair is one of these. He is pastor of the Prospect Street Congregational Church in Cambridge, and secretary of the Cambridge Ministers' Association. His son is a Harvard graduate.

He began his discussion of the Harvard situation by saying:

"There is altogether too much drinking at Harvard—and it is kept on. It will probably lead to more unhappy incidents."

More Since Repeat

"During the past year, there has been a noticeable increase in the consumption of liquor by students. I believe that since repeat, there has been more liquor consumed at Harvard than during the past 25 years."

"College authorities should be more strict if they desire to curb the already too free flow of dormitories. Why don't they handle the boys from a paternal standpoint?"

"A careful study of these boys will reveal that, in many instances, they are away from home for the first time in their lives. Their new freedom goes to their heads and they want to be practical."

Rev. Mr. Maenair suggests that the students should be handled as though they were still in their own homes. He doesn't think that too strict censorship should prevail, but that it should be impressed upon the student that college is no place for them to learn how to drink.

Would Ban Parties

To which some students might reply:

"What would be the sense of going to college?"

And Rev. Mr. Maenair would also do away with the Harvard house parties.

"Yes," he said, "I would like to see such parties abolished. Re-creation should be done in a way that only harm can come of them."

Harvard should suppress some of this social life and students should be compelled to devote a little more time to their studies.

"I do not want Harvard officials to think that I am an idealist and don't do it," he said. "My opinion is just the result of my own personal investigation and observation as a Cambridge clergyman."

And now, Shaun Kelly, Harvard's splendid football captain, appears on the scene to say a few words for the fair name of Harvard.

Very Distasteful

"The recent affairs at Harvard," he said, "have been very distasteful to other students."

"I think the incidents have been well publicized, with Harvard on the short end. And the loss said about these matters now, the better for the university and the student body. All we can hope for is that they will not be repeated."

"Of course, there is drinking at Harvard, but the students are no wilder than at any other college. I do not want to make any further comment on the situation."

So we thanked Shaun Kelly for his statement, and turned to an executive member of the student council. His opinion may be given, but he wishes his name withheld.

"The Student Council body," he said, "is quite sure over the recent publicity credited to the university."

"It is our chief aim at present to do everything within our power to sift out those that are most apt to create trouble while drinking and to keep a close eye on them. If necessary, we can bar them from future social activities."

"I hardly believe that the present student body is any wilder or is drinking any more than the graduates did during their four years at Harvard."

"House parties and cocktail parties are part of a student's social life and efforts are made to have them conducted in an orderly manner."

"Accidents of course will happen. Let us hope there will be no more."

When Harvard needs a champion, it has only to look to the Boston obstinates. Now, Harvard DOES need a champion—and the debaters are locally defending them. They like the boys as they are, and some of them add—"even if they do drink a little too much."

light—at least, not while I was there.

"And I think that the real explanation of Harvard's recent publicity is that they've had a series of very bad breaks."

Harvard students' social wildness will be treated from another angle tomorrow.

HARVARD GUEST BAN

Rules on Women Drawn Tighter

Spurred by recent tragedies, official Harvard moved today to tighten restrictions governing the resident living conditions of undergraduates.

Partial (pertaining to life within the walls of a college) regulations, affecting rules regarding women guests in all university buildings, were posted in the evening at Harvard house for the first time.

Student council recommendations regarding use of the liquor are expected to be posted next.

That an official curb on the freedom of undergraduate living is necessary if there is to be no repetition of recent tragic occurrences in the house is a belief shared by university authorities and a majority of the student body.

It was indicated, however, that new rules would be enacted for "house living" only as a last resort, in order that the principles of the house plan may be maintained.

More strict supervision by the house masters of the rules already in force is reported to have been secretly ordered.

The recent assault on one house resident and the fatal fall of a student in another house during a football game celebration have been inquired into by Harvard authorities.

The aids from the police investigation.

The partial regulations heretofore have been posted only in the Freshman dormitories, but today they appeared on bulletin boards in all the houses. With regard to women guests, the rules read:

"Women shall not enter the houses, dormitories, or clubhouses unattended; and a student when entertaining women guests, should see that they are properly escorted."

"A student living in a house must obtain special permission to receive women guests in his room from the master or the senior tutor."

"A student living in a university dormitory or elsewhere other than in a house must obtain special permission to receive women guests in his room from the dean of Harvard College."

"Such permission will be granted only when a chaperon is to be present. Permission to entertain women guests will ordinarily be given only for the hours between 1 p. m. and 7 p. m."

Before the sentence and fine were imposed, former District Attorney Robert T. Blumhull, counsel for Ryan, revealed to the court that Foster had been paid $7000 voluntarily by the Ryan family for his injuries.

Attorney Blumhull then called the elderly janitor to the stand and asked:

"Do you wish to see Ryan sent to jail?"

Foster replied:

"It seems to me that, not knowing the boy and not being sure just who did strike me, I would rather not see him sent to jail. I should feel unsatisfied about it. No, sir, I would rather not see him sent to jail."

Lieutenant Joseph Shannon of Cambridge police, who prosecuted Foster for the crime, was called to the stand and asked by Blumhull:

"Do you feel that the ends of justice require the jailing of Ryan?"

"I do not," the officer replied. Blumhull then, for a suspended sentence, claiming Ryan was not at all guilty, asked Ryan to admit it. It was Ryan who first rushed out of Dunster House and ordered Foster to "get out of my way."

BOY Locked in ICED CAR

HUNGRY, COLD FOR 10 DAYS

Baltimore, Dec. 2 (AP)—A 14-year-old boy was rescued here today from the terror of ten days' imprisonment without food or water in a dark, cold ice-compartment of a railway refrigerator car as it rattled slowly across the continent from California.

So desperate was the plight of the youth—Glenn Boidan of Motley, Minn.—that he chewed his wet cap and cotton top and ate seed from shoe bolts to satisfy hunger pangs.

He told his story at Union Memorial Hospital where he was taken for treatment for starvation and frostbite. A producer man found him semi-conscious after hearing means coming from the ice compartment.

5 Desert Him

The lad had crawled into the compartment at Knoxville or Tracy, Cal.—he couldn't remember which—Nov. 22 to hobo back to his Minnesota home. He had run away on Labor Day to escape a beating.

Five other boys climbed in with him. He soon fell asleep and when he awoke they had left, taking all the supplies with them. The compartment was locked fast and it was cold and dark.

He banged and hammered frantically against the walls, but it was no use. He could attract no one.

Thirsty, Hungry

There was no ice in the compartment, but dripping from another further forward kept it ice-cold. Glenn tied a string to a tobacco tin he had and tried to dip up water trickling through a gutter in the compartment, but with little success.

He ate the seed out of the cotton bolts he was taking home as souvenirs. He chewed his wet shoe tops and his cap, but that did little good. Finally he sank into a stupor.

Young Boidan said he had had various jobs during his trip and working on vegetable farms along his route. He started back, he said, when he heard his father, George Boidan, was ill.

Fisherman Towed

200 Miles to Port

With her rudder lost, the New Bedford dragger, Ventura II, was towed in to Boston Pier from Georges Banks, 200 miles to the east.

The dragger, carrying a crew of 12 men and commanded by Captain Fred Surcouf of New Bedford, lost her rudder on Saturday. She was taken in tow by the New Bedford dragger, Yagabond, Captain James Whalen, and brought into port with her 75,000 pounds of fish.

'Hiking' Preacher Sued by Constable

Suit for $25,000, alleging false and malicious defamation of character, was brought today in Superior Court at Dedham against the Rev. Owen A. Knox of East Braintree by William J. Weyand, Quincy constable and Braintree deputy tax collector.

The Rev. Knox, who last summer gained the title "hitch-hike preacher" when he hitch-hiked to New York to take part in a strike of shipyard workers, is alleged to have defamed Weyand in an article in a Quincy newspaper.

It is charged in the suit, filed by Attorney C. Sheldon Williams of Quincy, that the remarks of the Rev. Knox, now pastor of the East Braintree Methodist Episcopal Church, were based on Weyand's attempts to collect an excise tax in Braintree.

BAN ON HOUSING PLAN FOUGHT

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—A group of property owners asked the District of Columbia Supreme Court today to permit them to intervene on the side of the government in a legal controversy over a proposed low-cost housing project in South Boston.

Secretary Jones has been directed by the court to show cause on Dec. 10 why a restraining order should not be issued to prevent construction of the Old Harbor Village project in South Boston by the Public Works Administration.

A petition, seeking to block the project, was brought by former Governor Joseph R. Ely of Massachusetts in the vicinity of the project who contended their own investments would be affected adversely by the government building.

200,000 TO GET WPA JOBS, SAY OFFICIALS

More than 200,000 persons will be employed on WPA and PWPA projects in Massachusetts this winter, it was conservatively estimated today by those in charge.

Today, 115,000 were on WPA projects, according to State Administrator Arthur G. Rotch, who pointed out that this figure included 16,000 ERA workers which had been absorbed over the week-end and topped the ERA maximum for last March of 115,000.

Rotch expects to have completely absorbed the ERA workers by next week, when, he said, 220,000 will be at work on WPA projects.

The state quota for PWPA work had been set at 113,700 by Washington officials.

Indications are that few, if any, of the thousands of employables on the welfare rolls of the cities and towns will be transferred to the WPA payroll.

Only improved business and industrial conditions, it is said, will effect any reduction in Boston's welfare list, which is higher than it was in October and now totals 23,155.

At the WPA office, Andrew H. Peterson, appointed state administrator by Washington last week, assumed his new duties today.

Already $10,000,000 worth of contracts have been awarded by the WPA for seventy projects.

Complaints that 800 workers in Fitchburg had gone without pay for six weeks were explained today, both by the Fitchburg administrator and by State Administrator Rotch.

The workers had to be on the payroll at least two weeks before their names could be forwarded for pay and the necessary clearance for the payroll sheets required first to ten days, it was stated.

All of the workers received their checks last Friday morning, Rotch said.

Heart 'Healed' After Death Try

GIRL RESOLVES "NEVER AGAIN."

"I'll never try that again. No more is worth it," Helen James, 22, made that resolve as she lay on her cot in City hospital, recovering from a draught of poison.

Broken hearted when she was confronted by the fact that a man she believed loved her had chosen another girl, she tried to take her own life, she said.

Now she is completely recovered from the poison.

But more important, doctors agreed, was the fact that the cancer in her heart had healed—at least enough so that she will never "try that again."

MAYOR IRWIN PECK SENDS HIS RESIGNATION

Washington, Dec. 2 (UPI)—George N. Peck, president of the Second Export-Import Bank, had resigned, it was learned authoritatively today and his resignation probably will be accepted at a meeting of the board of trustees late this afternoon.

Peck's resignation culminates a long controversy with Secretary of State Cordell Hull over American foreign trade policies in which he came out second best, the President endorsing the Hull program.

The letter of resignation was addressed to H. Walton Moore, assistant secretary of state and chairman of the board of the bank.

Peck was head of the original Agricultural Adjustment Administration. In addition to being president of the Export-Import Bank he also bore the title of special foreign adviser to the President.

It is understood he has also resigned the post or will do so shortly.

Mayor Irwin charged his reputation as mayor suffered severely. Through his attorney, William H. Fitzgerald, he seeks a trial by jury.

the form prescribed by the Legislature, will be returned, and the makers will be given another opportunity to sign the prescribed form. Commissioner Smith has indicated.

In the case of Harvard, from which 1000 signed oaths, including that of Professor Mather, were received today, failure to sign the authorized version of the oath will result in the faculty member being dropped, according to Harvard officials.

ALL OATHS CHECKED
Commissioner Smith assigned all his available clerks today to checking the oaths received for errors, omissions and additions which he had found to void them under the law.

The clerks are paying no particular attention to the Harvard oaths, he declared, and added:

"I feel that I should not segregate the oaths returned by any particular institution. They will be checked in the order in which they are received."

There are upward of 55,000 here now and it appears that not until tomorrow noon will there be any returns made of documents which do not comply with the law.

The education commissioner has prepared a form letter to accompany rejected oaths. This letter reads:

"I am writing to state that the documents upon which the teachers, professors and instructors of (name of institution) have subscribed to the oath of allegiance, as prescribed in Chapter 276 of the Acts of 1935, have been received."

NEEDN'T RECEIVE THEM
"I note the documents of the following persons carry statements or comments in violation of the wording as given in the law: (name of person)."

"I am informed by the attorney general that the commission of education is not obliged to recognize for filing under said chapter, any document which contains anything except the oath, or affirmation, in the language in which the name is set forth under said Chapter 276, with the subscriber's name and the jurat immediately accompanying it."

"I am therefore returning the documents herewith."

As the signed oaths came into his office, Commissioner Smith was faced with a new puzzle, he revealed.

He has no way of knowing, unless each institution accompanies its batch of oaths with a statement of the faculty, whether or not all the faculty members have taken an oath in compliance with the law.

DELAY MATHER OATH
Some institutions are including faculty oaths, he said, but others are not—and there is nothing in the law to compel the institutions to include a roster.

Today's indications were that the oath submitted by Professor Mather of Harvard will not be returned at the university before tomorrow.

Upon return of the Mather oath, next move will be up to Harvard, with the Harvard Corporation.

Elsie Robinson Says:

Salute Dodgers Deserve Tyranny

FLAG, CONSTITUTION OATH OBJECTORS STIR WRATH

By ELSIE ROBINSON

On November 20, three grade school girls, in the Silver Lake school in Everett, Washington, refused to salute the United States flag. Similar refusals have occurred in half our states during the last year—most of them using religion as an excuse.

Last spring, a band of Vassar girl students marched to Albany to protest against a pending bill which would have compelled all students and instructors in a tax supported school.

Elsie Robinson says the bill was killed. The girls were applauded. There is at present a rumormongering in public schools of that 'strict' should be permitted to such or advocate Communism in their classes or endorse it elsewhere. These are only three comparatively mild examples of what is happening in this country at present. Not a day passes without a public protest from some Communist chapter of students on some college campus or a rumormongering in some state legislature on the subject.

Disenters Boomed

Reason? A minority declares that, "It's against their religion." A majority indignantly protest that, "It's a violation of individual liberty." The beginning of Fascist tyranny? Nor are all of these examples of long-haired fanatics or disgruntled idlers. The self-styled intelligentsia of the country, including practically every radical newspaper writer, have joined the cry. Disenters are bitterly boomed. In reply, I am pleased to announce that no capitalist boss needs to buy me. My personal opinions of people who prefer Communism while profiting by democracy are no spontaneous outpourings, that far from being forced to write 'em—wild horses couldn't prevent me. And my only regret is that my exact ideas are completely unprintable. There seems as yet no workable answer to those who defend disloyalty on the score of religion. Though why a Christ who commanded that we "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's" should draw the line at George Washington, seems a little hard to understand. But one can fortunately deal more freely with the tribe who so furiously resent compulsory salutes on the ground that it is an invasion of individual liberty.

Price of Liberty

And will you frankly tell me, my hearties, just when and why YOUR "individual liberty" became entitled to such exclusive and unusual consideration? Are you such childish believers in Santa Claus that you believe democracy was or ever can be gratis? Are you enjoying any luxury in these United States which has been bought at the price of someone's "individual liberty"? You have inherited the fruits of their effort without payment. Never in all your selfish lives have you then called upon to make a real sacrifice for the cause which cost them so dearly. Instead, you have only sneers and contemptuous comparisons with the Communist compartment—that nightmare of splendid slogan and disastrous reality. For the greedy, ignorant, intolerant Russian—your passionate enemy. But for your own close living, straight thinking, courageous forebears—sneers!

Worst Punishment

Addicted preachers of Poppycock—pervasive poison—ons can wish you no worse punishment than the full enjoyment of that government which you so admire. With what enthusiasm would you greet enforced labor and the housing and diet of pigs who can not now be hampered by the duty of raising a flag? As for me, I too would despise and abandon this land as you are doing if you were really its true representatives. But, thank God, you are not. Thank God, there are obscure millions who still fight the good fight and keep the faith of those who are gone... honest citizens are they—not contemptible Communist parasites who abuse and betray the favor and freedom they have won. THIRTY—THE BRAVE DEAD—CROSSED OUT—OUR NATIONAL SYMBOL—WOULD YOU SUBSTITUTE A COOTIE BREED IN FILTH AND LIVING IN LARCENY?

Eastern Coast Cities Objective in Red Drive

New York, Dec. 2 (US)—Red organizers working under orders from the central committee of the Communist party in the United States, it was learned today, have sent into several cities along the eastern coastline the past few weeks.

The move is part of the recently inaugurated united front drive. The red workers are understood to be consolidating the activities of Communist and Socialist units in each city. A confidential report, submitted by the Red agent sent to Norfolk, Virginia, sharply criticized the inactivity of leaders of the Socialist party there for failing to interest Negroes in the movement. Conditions in Norfolk, from the Communist standpoint, the report stated were far from satisfactory. The decision of the New York headquarters to send an active worker into the city, was praised. The report stated:

"The Communist Party groups need leadership." The Socialist Party organization in Norfolk, the report stated, is known as the unorganized labor league. Failure of the league to produce results was blamed on the unwillingness of its heads to "go after the Negroes."

"The man who is the most active in local Socialist Party affairs is a dreamy machinist. An English-born labor lawyer is his next-best fellow."

Charges Radicals Incite Pupil Routs
New York Dec. 2 (US)—Dr. Herbert Donovan, of the James Madison High School, Brooklyn, today amplified the charges he made Saturday that the National Student League was being financed by the Communist party to extend unversity propaganda in public schools. The charges were made in denouncing teachers' oaths of loyalty before the annual meeting of the National Council for Social Studies with Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union. Dr. Donovan said:

"It is plain to any teacher that members of the National Student League are in classrooms in fo-

most trouble and to indoctrinate other pupils with alien tenets directly opposed to American philosophy. "It is likewise obvious that these groups are being trained with Communist ideas from the very beginning and are being implemented by older minds to force the overthrow of the American government."

Hutton's Ex-Wife To Marry Again

Washington, Dec. 2 (US)—Mrs. Marjorie Post Close Hutton, millionaire New York socialite and divorced wife of Edward P. Hutton, will be married to Joseph E. Hutton, Washington attorney and former chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, in New York on December 15, it was learned here today.

The ceremony will be performed at Mrs. Hutton's apartment in New York City, with only a few close friends present.

Canadian Hunt Dooms 500 Bison

Edmonton, Alta. Dec. 2 (AP)—Sleuths uncovered on Elk Island today for the first time a strict killing of buffalo since 1924. Five hundred prime bison of the 2000 in Elk Island Park will be herded into a big corral where they will be easy targets.

A packing company gets the bison flesh, but the hides will be made into coats for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

NEW YORK TO CRACK DOWN ON RED FLAG DISPLAY

New York, Dec. 2 (US)—The first step in this city's campaign to crack down on display of red flags at radical meetings will be taken today by the board of aldermen. Alderman Murray Stand's resolution to amend the code of ordinances so as to prohibit red flags and require display of the American flag at all public meetings will be introduced at today's meeting. Efforts will be made to speed adoption of the resolution without referring it to committee. Today's meeting was called to consider the 1935 budget. Ordinary no other business would come before the board at such a meeting. If this technically can be overcome, Alderman Thomas J. Curran, Republican-fusion minority leader, will move for immediate consideration. Such a motion would require unanimous consent.

Sunday Slush Helps to Make
Sally Scudder Day Cosier

By BETTY ALDEN

I SUPPOSE THE MONTH of December, like everything else, has its pride, so yesterday started out to do everything in its power to maintain its wintry reputation. . . . But contrary to what might be expected, the wet snow and slush actually served to make Sally Scudder's afternoon tea party more cozy and friendly instead of spoiling it. . . .

Slippers and party frocks were not made for sloppy weather and all of Sally's guests welcomed the contrast when they laid aside their damp wraps, kicked off soggy overshoes and went greeting their hostesses, who were receiving before the fireplace in the warm, hospitable glow of candlelight. . . .

For the party was Sally's debut and many of her sister debs were on hand at the tea in her family's home in Brookline to welcome her into their ranks. . . . To harmonize with the pale lavender chrysanthemums and orchids which decorated the mantle piece and fireplace, Sally wore a gown of amethyst velvet made with a high shirred neckline, short puff sleeves, a long draped skirt and trimmed with brilliant clips. . . .

Her mother, Mrs. Winthrop Scudder, received with her, gowned in black crepe with silver metal cloth facings and a corsage of white orchids. . . .

Miss Betty Scudder, younger sister of the hostess, performed her duties as head pourer. . . . In the dining room, cozily illuminated with candles, a bevy of debs gathered around the table laden with sweets and tea. . . . A red damask tablecloth was spread over the table and the ingenious centerpiece was formed by an old Italian mirror and piles of colorful fruit. . . .

Miss Betty's frock of pale blue was worn with a deeper blue hat and a corsage of gardenias. . . . Assisting her at one time or another were Virginia Richmond, debutante daughter of Mrs. Charles Richmond of Brookline, gowned in black velvet very daintily trimmed with white. . . . Mary Pickering Older filled in at the last minute for one of the girls who was unable to attend. . . .

Peggy Capper's titian hair was well set off by her gown and hat of soft green and Sister Ware also wore a green outfit as she poured tea for many of Sally's friends. . . .

Frances Cove, whose party is scheduled for the first week in the New Year, wore a sophisticated outfit of black as did Katherine Day, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Day, Jr. of Newton. . . . Marjorie Danforth, Kay Rowbottom, Dorothea O'Day, who wore a brown velvet dress and hat, Peggy Wright in a fetching olive green outfit and Anne Bement were others assisting this now little deb into society. . . .

Pourer to Become Salesgirl

Mary Pickering Older, one of the pourers, is going to be inaugurated as salesgirl this week at the sale of Labrador handicrafts at a Temple Place Shop, in the interests of the Labrador Grenfell Missions. . . . Other girls of social prominence who will help customers select their Christmas gifts will be Mrs. Joseph Balch, Jr., Mrs. Henderson Inches, Mrs. Howard Guild, Jr., Mrs. Charles Walcott, Mrs. Robert Huribut and Mrs. Gibbs Sherrill. . . .

Debutante Peggy Capper will undoubtedly be pressed into service sometime during the sale since her mother, Mrs. Francis Capper, is co-chairman with Miss Elizabeth Hamilton, of Milton. . . .

Miss Elizabeth Hamlin, a close friend of Becky Hobbs', was one of the many Sunday nighters who took advantage of the opportunity to benefit the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund, as well as to enjoy a jolly evening's entertainment laughing at the rollicking absurdities of "Three Men on a Horse". . . . She wore a pretty black dinner gown with a yoke and sleeves of American Beauty chiffon. . . .

Plan Winter Abroad

Mrs. Charles Prince of Boston and Dublin, N. H., and her youngest daughter, Haldis, have planned a very pleasant and varied itinerary for their winter's sojourn abroad. . . . The holiday season will be spent with Mrs. Prince's relatives in Oslo (she is the former Haldis Moller) and later in the winter, if the war threats subside, they will go south to be the guests of Mrs. T. Handasyd Cabot. . . . The Cabots are former Bostonians, and members of the ever increasing colony of Americans who own and inhabit Villars in Florence. . . .

Daughter Priscilla, whom Mrs. Prince left behind in this country, is apparently not letting time hang heavy on her hands for she spent the week end in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria and was entertained at several Gotham parties. . . . Priscilla, whose social register address is Dublin, registered at the Waldorf as of Mt. Auburn St., Cambridge. . . .

With the Christmas holidays approaching so rapidly, Bostonians are making their last hurried trip to visit out of town friends before settling down to domestic interests surrounding the holiday. . . . Over the past week end Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Bigelow of Chestnut Hill were in New York City. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartlett of "Tree Tops," Beverly were at the St. Regis in New York and Oliver Simpkins was also a guest at that hotel. . . .

Quite a few Boston debutantes are looking forward to one of the Christmas dances in New York when Mr. and Mrs. Edmund P. Cassell introduces Mrs. Cassell's daughter, Miss Audrey Thomas, at a large tea dance at the Waldorf-Astoria. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Cassell and Miss Thomas, whose home is in Providence, spent the week end in New York. . . .

The current campaign of the Women's Crusade is increasing the popularity of opening private homes for charitable causes. . . .

This week in all parts of Boston and its suburbs, prominent socialites are entertaining groups of 10 or more friends and neighbors at coffee or tea parties and inviting one of the volunteer speakers to interpret for them the human needs of the community at large. . . .

Tomorrow morning the Belmont neighbors of Mrs. Edward H. Baker will meet at her house for one of these parties and over in Brookline Miss Margaret Fish will be hostess to a group of friends. Mrs. Andrew A. Highland will assist her. . . . Miss Elizabeth C. Leland of Milton and Mrs. Edward Stevens of Wellesley Hills will account for the two widely separated groups who are to be instructed in the work of the Women's Crusade at their morning coffee. . . .

League Plans
Yule Concerts

With Christmas only three weeks away, the Junior League Glee Club is preparing for the annual holiday concerts in various homes and hospitals for the aged and infirm. . . .

The first of these concerts will be given in the second week in December. The program will consist of some new carols as well as many of the old familiar ones. . . . In this year's group of singers are Mrs. F. William Andrews, Mrs. Lewis E. Ball, Mrs. Edward Ball, Mrs. Norman P. Dana, Mrs. William H. Davies, Mrs. William P. King, Mrs. Oliver S. To most of us yesterday was just a typical example of sloppy New England weather, but it was a Day of Days to Sally Scudder who made her debut at a large tea given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Scudder of Brookline. . . .

SEEK BEAUTY, BRAINS

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP)—Beauty, beauty, personality and style—that's all men students at the University of Rochester ask of their brides. . . .

Of course, the little woman also should know how to cook, sew, and be well versed in all domestic arts "until we make enough to hire help." . . .

She should be generous, a good hostess, have a sense of humor and the desire to improve her mind, a campus survey showed. . . .

In case some girls should be taken aback by these requirements, the boys qualified their demand for beauty thus: . . .

"Good looks enough to stick up against the best of them, though not necessarily beautiful." . . .

Hobby Show Opens Tomorrow

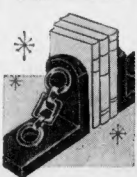

Featuring more than 10,000 antiques, the second annual New England hobby show will open tomorrow in Horticultural Hall and continue through Saturday. . . .

Other exhibits will include a miniature house with all the furnishings made by Oscar Johnson of Roxbury. John D. Smith of Newburgh will show hundreds of souvenir spoons. Esther Phelps Jones of Brookline will exhibit figurines of canals. Dr. W. G. Bridges, Newton, will show his collection of old wood carvings. . . .

Perkins Institute, the various N. M. C. A. and Kiwanis clubs, the Boston fire department and many others will also be among the exhibitors. . . .

Today and every day, you will find excellent used cars advertised in the Automobile-For-Sale Columns of the American and Advertiser. . . .

HOLLAND STAGE "Ceiling Zero" Relieves Dull Month

By GEORGE HOLLAND

A dull early December, from the standpoint of incoming theatrical attractions, will be relieved somewhat a week from tomorrow by the appearance of "Ceiling Zero" at the Copley Theater. As general director, Mary Young will supervise the production of "Ceiling Zero," but she will not take an acting part.

So Boston, following the departure of Alla Nazimova and "Ghosts" next Thursday night, will not be reduced to the extremity of having but a single choice, "Three Men on a Horse," for its show going.

"Three Men on a Horse" enjoyed the most profitable week of its five-week Boston visit with the fiscal period closing the past Saturday. And George Holland seems little doubt but that the very funny comedy will outlive the old year at the Plymouth. Mrs. Nazimova's time-worn vehicle, "Ghosts," has no professional praise at the Copley Theater and enough of the city has been interested to make her visit a pleasant one. The star has other plans in mind, with the probability present that she will sign a contract with the Theatre Guild for a new production. "Ghosts" and Mrs. Nazimova will leave Boston Saturday at midnight. At that time, with the probability present that she will sign a contract with the Theatre Guild for a new production. "Ghosts" and Mrs. Nazimova will leave Boston Saturday at midnight. At that time, with the probability present that she will sign a contract with the Theatre Guild for a new production.

This quarter, staunchly in favor of Miss Young's production enterprise at the Copley, trust that her showmanship is being put to the test in presenting "Ceiling Zero." An excellent cast with Oswald Perkins in the fast-talking role of the boss of an important air-line, paired to win the public in paying proportions when the play was produced by Brock Pemberton and Antoinette Perry in New York last May.

And "Ceiling Zero" was housed in New York, most successful theater, the Minsk. The play has a dramatic second curtain, one of the most thrilling ever written.

Hollywood Litvak Signed to Direct Boyer in 'Simoon' Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Media Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 (US)—Probably the biggest story to come out of Wanger's office since he became an independent producer is the signing of Anton Litvak, European director, to direct Charles Boyer in "Simoon."

Litvak directed the never-to-be-forgotten "Love Me Tonight" with Jan Kiepura and he also was a Major Domo on Boyer's "Mayerling" production in France.

Naturally it was Charles Boyer who was a popular choice for the part of the man who has to go through the desert. The story is now being written by Humphrey Cobb, author of the famous "Moby-Dick."

"It's the story of the French king in Morocco and goes into production after Charles finishes 'Invitation to a Beheading,' the next Marlene Dietrich movie."

"The Informer," which started out to be a critics' picture, has built and built until today it is one of Radio's big money makers and in England has broken all box office records.

Pandora Serman will try to do a repeat on it by running Victor McLaglen, the star, and John Ford, the director, and Dudley Nichols in "The Plough and the Stars."

Radio will give Marlene Delaney of the Abbey Players, the female lead, the has been under contract to Radio for some time without having made more than one picture.

Victor seems to do his best work with John Ford and it is a good idea to keep them together.

Enthusiasm ran high on the Warner Brothers lot following word from New York that "Boy Meets Girl," a New York play, is another hit. You know what it means to have a Broadway success.

Warner Brothers, who have probably put more money into stage plays than any other producers, are looking around for a Paul Muni play.

It is said to be as far as the screen and finishes "Good Earth," which has been under contract to him, he will probably take time off to go on the stage for his motion picture bosses.

Chatter in Hollywood: The very pretty Polynesian girl who plays opposite Clark Gable in "Mutiny on the Bounty" is a native Hawaiian by the name of Memo

Clark, who can have a movie career if she chooses.

But Miss Clark is now taking a preparatory legal course at the University of Southern California, and she prefers to be a lawyer to a star.

Small danger of this girl's having her head turned for the has refused six movie offers, deciding that it's much more important for her to complete her schooling and become a lawyer than to let her laurels as an actress.

ROCHELLE HUNTER and HARRY RICHMAN both in makeup, lunching at a "fine street cafe," their romance getting hotter and hotter; PAT DUFFY and MARY MCKAY, SIMON'S dinner; Pat gets around quite a bit these days; JOAN RENNETT and GENE MARKEY hosts at a dinner December 2; that's all today. I WANT YOU ONLY

By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Ned was immaculately dressed as always. He came nervously and escorted her to his table. She admired the ease with which he ordered: the immense sophistication with which he said: "Some very dry sherry. Gus—make it that good Amonillo." He filled the glasses, raised his, and looking in her eyes said happily: "You're prettier, Nell! Not such a little white ghost as last year."

"Thanks, Mister, but can I go back to work with the smell of liquor on my breath?" "Perhaps you're not going back to work, little girl!" A flush crimsoned to his twinkling brown eyes. He was aware of it and laughed in a sly, conscious way, beginning at once to tell of his travels.

Ned's Proposal

Then he told of a survey he was to make: "I'm going all over the U. S. A., Nell, then to the home office in London. I'll be gone three or four months. He clasped her hand and it hurt, he said, desperate: "You're not stopping me this time, you're doing it too often. This isn't the way I meant to ask you but I'm saying it through." He went on, eager, flushing, trying: "But wait a minute, Ned. I can't leave. You see? I know you don't love me. You're fond of me. Like to dance with me. Don't mind I put my arm around you. It's not the man of your dreams... not an Adonis."

"In two months I can make you forget all this—make you incredibly glad. I'm old enough to prize you, to cherish and greatly love you. Nell, marry me and come along!" "Yes, I can't marry you," said Nell.

"You're worried about your mother. I've thought of that. As much as you give her now, you can continue. More—"

"It's not my mother." "His hand on her relaxed. "Then it is all swept up between you and Calhoun?" "Yes—it is!"

"She was impelled to tell him the truth. That mysterious faculty so much more prophetic than our conscious and judging mind moved her urgently: "But, you've married now. My square with him. It's wiser."

Just as she would have spoken, he took a small box from his pocket and dropped it before her. He said in a covered voice: "Tell me now like you tell Nell!"

Aztec Jewels

"I said, 'An Aztec jeweler made them several hundred years ago. The stones have a green tinge like your eyes. Put them on, Nell.'"

"I can't take them, Ned." "Yes—you can. For old time's sake. I'll be happy knowing you have them."

Waiting for Ricky that evening, she tried on the aztec jewels. They were chains in substance, but full of allure and whiteness in design.

She heard Ricky's step. She darted across the room to the table and started dinner. He didn't see her as he entered. His face appeared gentle with a grim look on his mouth.

But it must have been the shadows. In a moment he pulled off his hat and was smilingly smiling in a moment he had her in his arms and said with the warm politeness which remained an ever-new thrill:

"When I was a kid and got a bike after long waiting. I used to run home from school to make sure it was still there. It's the same tickled feeling coming to you, Nell."

"We Can Meet It"

Presently, he saw the bracelet. When Nell told him of the luncheon, he picked up the silver bracelet, studied it, and said:

"Nice workmanship. He had his back turned. "You must have had a gay, sweet, easy time of it with him, Nell."

"I'm not looking for an easy berth! When my life is finished, Ricky, I want to be a woman. I've plunged deep into the swift full stream of life. I don't want to skim as a dry leaf on the surface."

"Never could understand why women fight so hard to side-step struggle. They struggle. They want to escape life. I want to seize it—Ricky, I'm glad you've had to suffer for the hours we've had. And now what happens, don't you think that together, we can meet it?"

He took her hand and slowly kissed the fingers. "You may not want a soft berth, Nell, but did you guess you were half so strong and fine?" Her eyes were brimming, yet they laughed tenderly.

"We know this marriage would be hard, Ricky. But you're right"

A Schiaparelli Design

By ANNIE BRINK

SCHIAPARELLI's subtle feeling for the strikingly simple in sports clothes is reflected in this little one-piece knitted frock of her designing. And characteristic of her is the original treatment of the crew-neck idea... which makes one forget completely Clark Gable's sponsorship of the crew-neck idea... Ingeniously, the sleeves are smoothed into bodice in the raglan manner, and the sleeve is gored in from the hip line. If you wish for knitting directions on this new look, write Annie Brink, Fashion Editor Boston Evening American, and please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Health

Importance of Proper Posture

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"SCOLIOSIS" is a big word; it is the medical name for curvature of the spine. This affliction can usually be entirely corrected if adequate steps are taken in early childhood.

Spinal curvature is shown by an abnormal position of the spine. It produces a twisting of the trunk, either to the right or left, or from before backward, so that the body is carried at the wrong angle.

At times the deformity is indicated by a marked bulging of the back, giving the appearance of a hunch-back.

Of course, not all cases are so marked; indeed, in many instances the abnormality can only be detected by careful scrutiny. It is unfortunate that the condition is so frequently overlooked, because it may lead to other disturbances. Constipation, indigestion, headache and even nervousness are sometimes caused by spinal curvature.

At times this deformity can be traced to some infantile disease, such as rickets, tuberculosis, or congenital hip disease. In most instances, however, it is promoted by faulty posture. This wrong posture is frequently neglected because few persons realize its importance.

Children should be taught the importance of posture and made to realize its effect upon health. Many youngsters in poor health and slow in development are greatly benefited when the posture is corrected.

It is well to remember that the spine of the body should be maintained, not only in standing, but also in sitting. In fact, it is even more important to maintain good posture while sitting. I cannot overstate the need of good sitting posture for the school child.

Anybody, don't make the mistake of many beginners, and think that you must write of something exciting, or strange, or far away. No one is likely to write well when his steps clear outside his own experience.

Well, it's a queer thing, but most writers will do better with a subject, one which their first enthusiasm has died down than they will on some broad, new theme that has taken their fancy.

Flawless ANALYSIS Is Bridge KEYNOTE

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON An Interesting Squares Play I am indebted to Mr. John D. Bibb of Anniston, Alabama, for an interesting analysis of the play is without a flaw, so I am using it verbatim.

♠ Q 12
♥ A Q 10
♦ A Q 10
♣ A 10 2

North and South vulnerable. Part score 20. The bidding: South West North East 1♠ Pass 2NT Pass 3♠ Pass 4♠ Pass (final bid)

The opening lead was the ace of spades, and North's King was allowed to hold the trick.

The loss of a heart trick appeared inevitable, and the contract seemed safe enough, so I decided to make an extra trick for me, if possible.

Therefore, I led the two of hearts, and flumed the ten, thinking that if it held, I might pick up a trick that way, and if it did not, I would be ready for a later squeeze if that should develop.

The ten lost to the Jack of hearts, and the six of spades was led. The eight of spades fell to the Ace, and I then led the diamond King in the squeeze.

The Queen. The diamond Ace followed, and then the club three to the Queen.

This lost to the Ace. Another spade was led, and I ruffed this and drew the last adverse trump, then laid down what I thought was my last trump, throwing a club from dummy.

This put West in a squeeze, the situation being, before the last trump was played, as follows:

♠ A 3
♥ A 7 4
♦ A 7 4
♣ A 3

"One interesting thing is that the whole was played allowed for an even break in hearts, or for the ace of hearts to be in the East hand, or for a squeeze if West held the hearts and clubs."

"It is true that had West held the hearts and clubs, he would not have been squeezed, but this would have been a double-dummy play."

Egg Masque Has Lifting Invigorating Effect

By ARLENE GOULD

HAVE YOU EVER come home so tired from work that you would rather have a good cry than go out to dinner?

No matter how fresh and radiant your complexion is of a morning, doesn't it lose its glowing, youthful accent after a difficult day at the office or an afternoon spent shopping?

The secret of those alluring, lovely strains of the screen—modern sophisticates in every sense of the word—lies in the treatment upon the texture of their skin.

Once the tiny nerve centers lose vitality and the skin structure becomes flaccid and toneless, youth and their careers are ended. To the for beauty and cherish the fullness of life, has long been the aim of lovely women all through the ages.

Take for instance the case of lovely Claire Trevor. The void and intense for pretenses, she is in the exact opposite of the wonder of her body—revels in the wonder of her creamy, satin skin.

"The many beauty aids on the market today," she says, "but they must be supplemented. The goddess of beauty helps them with her own hands."

Every week of her life Claire gives herself a "Hollywood egg-white facial." This treatment, she says, stimulates the blood to renewed action, closes the pores and leaves the skin soft, smooth and soft.

FORCED BY CLAIRA TREVOR

"The skin must be given a chance to breathe and function normally." Claire says: "Tense and skin feeding creams are needed but I don't believe in leaving them on too long. And once a week I put ordinary sweet milk or cream on my face and throat, and leave it on overnight. It acts as a combination softener, skin food and skin bleach."

The egg-white facial is my pet, however. Try it when you have a special engagement and are tired. It takes 10 minutes at most, and you feel and look tingling and rosy. If your face feels a bit dry after the egg facial, rinse it in water softened by a handful of ordinary cereal oatmeal."

If you would like Claire Trevor's recipe for her old-fashioned egg-white facial, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Arlene Gould, Boston Evening American, Boston.

HARRIET AGAIN

REPROACHES HERSELF

CHAPTER III

"HARRIET," I said vehemently, as my sister-in-law turned back from ushering Junior and Roderick out of my sick room, with the comment that perhaps it was a fortunate thing that she never had a child. "What do you mean by a speech like that?"

But I knew. Her mournful eyes as they followed Roderick out of the room and then fixed themselves upon me, pointed her words.

And the next instant she put her thought into words. "When I see you with the children, I think that I must be something lacking in me," she said, and then she turned and looked at Roderick with me for a long time, yet he never showed any such affection for me as he evinced just now. Why? The child adores you! Please don't think I'm jealous. I'm so glad he has found so wonderful a place for himself in the world. But I feel guilty somehow."

MADGE COMFORTS "And that is the silliest thing I ever have heard you say," I told her warmly. "Remember that when you look over the state of affairs you also assumed the care of his two older brothers, William and Henry, and Mary. It was a tremendous task for anyone not used to children, and I know for Mary how you performed it."

"Mary," she said incredulously. "I don't know Mary did that way. Why? Don't you remember that I was a very good mother?"

"You know very well," I said severely, "that Mary had no grievance, against you, but against that school—"

"To which I sent her," Mary said, "that Mary did that way. Why? Don't you remember that I was a very good mother?"

"And you know," I said, "that Mary was at fault in that matter. Something that no one recognizes comes clearly now that Mary herself. And you are wrong if you think that Mary's children of your sister Elizabeth do not love you very dearly, and are not most grateful to you for all you did for them."

HARRIET PROTESTS "Harriet, I'm not going to let you go against another syllable of my life. You know I've told her sternly. You took those children when they were just lost their own mother, the most trying time possible. It would not have been natural for them to give a strong affection to any other woman, even a near relative. Run along, and I'll hold the fort."

"Also, as you very well know, there is a certain subconsciousness in both small boys which makes them both exuberant in their display of affection for me. Anything more about that your deduction, from Roderick's attitude, to talk and action, that you had failed in mothering him, and should not have been given a child of your own."

"You dear," she said, "Who could refuse you anything? All right, I won't say or think it again."

DICKY AGAIN A light knock on the door brought her upright again. "That's Dicky's knock," I said. "I asked him to come back when the children should have gone—that is—with your permission—"

"I think that will be all," she said, and, crossing to the door, threw it open.

In the room, Richard, she said, to my husband, standing upon the threshold, "You're just in time to relieve me. I'm going out for a breath of fresh air, if you'll wait a minute. I'll be back in half an hour. I'll be back in half an hour."

"Sister mine," Dicky said with a flourish. "Making my wife be, and keeping her from talking. Is the job I'd rather have than anything else but. It's a job for three men, not one poor wretch. But never shall I be said that the pride of any of the Garrison family."

BEGINNER WRITES OF NEIGHBOR'S ROMANCE

"WHAT shall I write about?" says young Mrs. Bruce. "I'd rather spend my time writing stories than at anything else."

"Now, what shall I use for plots? I haven't traveled much, I'm not deeply learned nor deeply philosophical. I just know my own town and my own crowd."

And that's a fine start for writing, Mrs. Bruce. You know the kind of people most of us are, living the pretty average kind of lives that most of us lead. So if you can write about the kind of things that interest most of us—what millions of readers may have!

PROPER'S TOMB YIELDS BODY OF KILLER'S WIFE

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Kansas City, Kan., Dec. 2 (INS)—The proper tomb of Kansas City's unknown girl, whose body was found October 8, 1934, today was found to be holding the remains of Elizabeth Childers Comer, wife of Chester Comer, mechanical Oklahoma killer who was shot to death a week ago today in a gun battle with a law marshal.

Positive identification was announced by J. B. Jenkins, acting chief of Kansas city detectives. Comer is suspected of eight other ghastly murders, including that of his second wife, Lucille Stevens Comer.

SHOT 3 TIMES
When found, the body of Elizabeth had been shot five times in the face and stripped of clothing effects except a cheap dress and homelike underclothing.

The dead girl's identity was established by Jenkins as a rare dental defect in her upper teeth which had been kept secret by the detective through 18 previous "positive" identifications.

Other missing persons believed murdered by Comer are Ray Simpson, Okla., attorney; L. A. Simpson, Piedmont, Okla., farmer; and J. H. Simpson, Okla., farmer. Comer's second wife, Mr. and Mrs. George Lettice and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Herbert, Illinois tourists who disappeared in New Mexico May 21.

Parents of 18 missing girls identified Elizabeth's body as that of their daughter, but all 18 girls were later found to be alive.

Accused by close friends and relatives, Miss Norma Clive of Henchman street, North End, leaves municipal court after appearing against a man whom she accuses of having attempted to kidnap her. Federal authorities are investigating. The man was held in heavy bonds.

G-Men Enter North End Kidnap Case

In a surprise move today "G-men" stepped into the investigation of the alleged kidnaping of Norma Clive, of Henchman street, North End, for which Samuel Valery, 35, of Troy, N. Y., is held.

The federal men made their appearance in the case in municipal court where Miss Clive appeared to press charges against Valery.

Miss Clive told the court Valery posed as a contractor and offered her a secretary's job.

She said Valery asked her to accompany him to Providence, R. I., where he had to visit a seminary. She said that when they reached that seminary it was in darkness and that she believed they would return to Boston.

Instead, the girl said, Valery continued on to Westbury, and that when she realized that she was being kidnaped she managed to get out of the automobile and hitch-hike home.

When Valery was asked if he had anything to say, he replied: "I had three or four drinks, I don't remember anything that happened."

Miss Clive declared that Valery had not been drinking. Judge Adair ordered him held for the grand jury and set bail at $50,000.

The federal men, after the hearing, indicated that federal action might be taken against Valery.

QUINCY MAYOR DIGS UP CASH

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin of Quincy will go before the city council tonight to demand $475 for payment of administrative salaries for the balance of the year.

Last Saturday, when pay checks were due for his three secretaries, Mayor Burgin discovered funds had been exhausted.

He, however, had received his pay, which amounted to $68 1/2. The mayor promptly borrowed into his own check and paid his secretaries, leaving him $11.15.

A month ago when the mayor ran out, he petitioned the council for $475 for the balance of the year. The council gave him $400.

Supernard Death Laid to Fist Blow

Arthur G. Supernard, 47, of Sacramento place, Cambridge, a window dresser who died of injuries at a bachelor's dinner in a downtown Boston hotel last March was the victim of an unidentified person's criminal act, an inquest report revealed today.

The report, by Judge A. K. Cohen, declared Supernard was struck and fell by head hitting the floor.

Drinking and noise he was being endured out by Samuel Golub, 24, of Mount court, Roxbury, and an unidentified man when the blow was struck, the report says.

'Social Life Ruined,' Artist Wins Divorce

Accusing her husband of being rude to her friends and with failing to pay the household bills, Mrs. Elizabeth L. McKisnoek, Boston artist and socialite, was one of a dozen to obtain a divorce in Eastham court today.

She told Judge Joseph McCool that Alvin McKisnoek, of Brookline, had ruined her social life.

The divorce was uncontested. Mrs. McKisnoek was given custody of their son, David, with $150 a month toward his support.

She declared that although endorses postered her for minor bills, her husband was able to buy a $1200 race horse.

Mrs. McKisnoek was married in December, 1927, in a private wedding ceremony, at which there were no attendants. She is the former Miss Elizabeth Wilson Lee.

TELLS OF DRINKING
Among the other divorces granted was that of Mrs. Lucy Thibodeau, of Plainville, from Charles H. Thibodeau.

"My husband once lay on a couch with a jug of whiskey and didn't get up for three days," Mrs. Thibodeau testified.

She said that in 1927 she was in the yard weeding the garden when her husband came up behind her and kicked her so hard that she required medical attention.

They had been married in 1894, and lived together for 40 years.

WARRIED AWAY
Giendella Curthell of Weymouth received a divorce from Albert G. Curthell when she testified that the last time she had seen him was in 1923, four years after he had wandered away.

A ransom note was received by the boy's parents Saturday asking $50,000 francs for his return.

DIARY DEEPENS GIRL MYSTERY

Westford, Dec. 2.—Discovery of a diary today deepened the mystery shrouding the strange shooting of Greenelaine Gallagher, found dead in her room here Friday.

Police Chief John F. Sullivan and the girl's uncle, George O'Brien, found the diary under a board in the room of O'Brien's home, where the girl's scantily clad body, the head almost covered by a sheeting charge, was discovered.

Chief Sullivan said he would investigate the entry under Nov. 30, the day after the girl's body was found, which said "Charles Z. Chalmersford." The entry was presumably in the girl's own handwriting. Police believe it might have been an appointment for last day.

Dr. Frank S. Bulkeley, of Ayer, medical examiner, said today he would ask for an inquest.

CHARGE CHARGED
Gertrude P. Bates, of Wollaston, charged Arthur B. Bates with cruel and abusive treatment.

Leiter Bates, her father-in-law, testified for her, describing her as a fine woman and an excellent mother.

Bates agreed to pay $35 a week toward the support of their son, Robert, who was given into Mrs. Bates's custody, and to pay her $250 counsel fees.

He also made over to her two insurance policies.

Kidnaped French Baby Is Found

A ransom note was received by the boy's parents Saturday asking $50,000 francs for his return.

McElroy, stricken with pneumonia several days ago, died at 5 a. m. today, just 24 hours after firemen had begun their fight in an attempt to save him through use of oxygen.

The firemen were called in at 5 a. m. Sunday by Dr. William F. Frezza when McElroy took a turn for the worse.

Firemen Arthur Nugent and Patrick Loon were the first to respond, and they were relieved throughout the battle by others of the department. A total of 12 oxygen tanks were used.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

I take an especial interest in the celebration this coming week of the hundredth anniversary of the Thatcher Magoun house in Medford. But that interest has nothing to do with the exhibition of material about old sailing ships built in Medford, which is the real reason for holding the celebration. Thatcher Magoun and the ships he built along the Mystic are famous in the lore of American ship construction. But I must leave his namesake Professor F. Alexander Magoun of M. I. T. to deal with the subject.

My only interest in the hundred year old house is as a public library. For in the fine old mansion standing high on its sloping bank, with its double swell-front, tall white pillars, and dark wine-red walls, I really got my education. I more than any other of the hundreds of thousands of Medford boys and girls; you may ask. Probably not, yet the old library made a curious effect on me nearly forty years ago.

Worcester Library Then Among World's Worst

My only previous contact with a public library had been in Worcester, Massachusetts, where I lived until the age of ten. Now the Worcester Public Library at that time, and probably for many years afterward, was one of the world's worst. Many years later I remember reading that the city administration still resolutely refused to appropriate money to modernize the old plant. You can imagine what it was like when the Spanish War was going on.

There was no card catalog. One looked up books in an antiquated printed catalog and the innumerable printed supplements to that catalog. Then one filled out a card with as many numbers as one desired. The card vanished into the dark caverns behind the scenes. Presently it returned, either with no book or one well down the list that you didn't want anyway. The general atmosphere was that of a Sunday School library, and the books available for small fry only increased the resemblance.

Medford Library Proves Revelation to Young Reader

That is why the Medford Public Library, which I was persuaded to try out after the family had moved its lares and penates to Mystic, even before the Spanish War was over, proved to be such a revelation. The building was gracious with its shining dark wood work and furniture, its two rotundas, high ceilings, and long polished corridor. Even the original letter written by George Washington and preserved under glass, was exciting.

Soon Extended Reading Beyond Children's Room

But above all, the library was modern! There was a separate children's room up stairs with low tables and chairs, big windows and plenty of light. And here the wonder began, the bookshelves were open!

It was a most hospitable library. The pleasant ladies in charge made no effort to keep small boys upstairs under proper supervision. Presently I was in the down-stairs stacks browsing and losing myself for hours under the most unlikely letters of the Dewey catalog system, taking home, I suspect to the amusement of the ladies at the desk, books I could hardly understand and exchanging them for books I couldn't understand at all.

At high school one read slowly and piecemeal the authorized classics 'appointed to be read in schools' but at the library one boxed the compass of the literatures of the world. Once mother came across Tolstoy's "Resurrection" and ordered it taken back, but I remember no other occasion of the sort. Then, and not in later years, not even in college, one did the reading that one has no longer the time, or interest, or enthusiasm for. Then and there, in the University of the People.

The card catalog system and the open shelf system re-created the American Public Library, and I, at the critical years, was fortunate to find in Medford, in the old red Magoun house, an excellent example of the kind of intelligent modern library that was to be, with subsequent improvements, the American norm. Here is a centenary worth observing.

NEW TRIAL PLEA HIT

By MARQUETTE MOORES

International News Service Correspondent

Wise, Va., Dec. 2.—One jury of mountain men—nearly all of them from remote farms, not even natives of this community of a thousand people, with a terrible jail but an excellent high school—on a jury of stern, old-fashioned, not-to-be-foolled hill folk, has found Edith Maxwell, 21, school teacher, guilty of murder in the first degree and deserving a

More than 5,000 Lynn shoe workers left their benches at noon today, declaring a half holiday in protest against the reopening of the Lynn Shoe Company, following the formation of an employees' company union.

5000 Lynn Shoe Workers Walk Out

When word of the half holiday reached Lynn police headquarters Chief James H. Broad declined 50 officers for possible trouble. The workers planned to gather in Lawrence Hall where union officials will lead the protest meeting. While the meeting is in session Congressman William F. Conner, accompanied by officials will visit the Lynn Shoe Company, following the formation of an employees' company union.

'Had Fair Trial'

Mr. Ella Dawson, another passenger in the car that took Edith home, "I never knew her well before that night, but I didn't like the way she talked. It seemed to me tough. She was talking about a married man who had been separated from his wife. I believe in the modern girl, but I don't think she should interfere with her married partner. I feel as if she had a fair trial and got what she deserved."

Mr. Oscar Denton, a "pound" "I think she got what was coming to her, and so do 99 per cent of the people around here. I think mother was in it as deep as she was."

CHRISTIAN TEACHING

Communism and economic ills which threaten the United States and the world can be challenged by living up to Christ's teaching, the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., told members of the League of Catholic Women in a lecture at the Coppley-Plaza.

Cardinal O'Connell, who was present in the throng of more than 1000 women, clergymen and educators, in remarks after Fr. Walsh's lecture expressed himself as in hearty agreement with his opinions.

Father Walsh, who is vice-president of Georgetown University, proposed two methods to halt the spread of Communism and economic ills.

First was the formation of a national economic council to replace the Federal Reserve Board, and secondly, the issuance of "labor shares" to recognize the worker who contributes to the body capital to industrial enterprises.

Council of Leaders

The economic council proposed by Father Walsh would be composed of leaders of all groups and would set in an unofficial capacity although designed for the good of all the people.

"Such an autonomous council," he declared, "would achieve by voluntary cooperation what government has attempted to do and failed."

"Would it not be a better way to plan national economy than those fantasies drawn as they were by theorists whose hands never felt a plough and whose figures never underwent the realistic scrutiny of a company auditor?"

"Labor Shares"

In recommending "labor shares" Father Walsh said: "Just as capital shares are issued providing dividends to investors, there can be contrived similar certificates for workers who contribute bodily capital to the joint enterprise."

The new wealth created by capital and labor heat serves its ethical objectives by more equal distribution among its two creators."

There are innumerable things to buy for a small boy at Christmas time, and the toy departments are doing a rushing business. But so, also, is the Animal Rescue League on Carver street. And no one can tell you better than they how much a small boy loves a dog—unless it's the small boy himself.

Every year, as Christmas draws near, the Rescue League discovers that it cannot meet the demand for lovable mongrels. At present, there is only one left in the "ready to leave" department.

But upstairs, there are forty or more lost, strayed and abandoned dogs. They have just recently found their way to Carver street and they are now going through a six-day quarantine period. Several of them have already been spoken for, and Christmas morning may find them all with a loved and loving master.

Safety Pins the Cause Of Many Pets' Illness

Hardly a day goes by without a few major operations being performed by the doctors of the Animal Rescue League.

For dogs, like babies, are inclined to swallow things that they shouldn't, and safety pins are often found to be at the root of all the trouble. A Spitz puppy, with more original tendencies, was just recently relieved of no less than seven iron washers.

And one of the doctors told us that he once removed a tablespoon from a dog's stomach. Both the dog and the tablespoon were returned, as good as new, to their owner.

Police Difficulties Grow
Worse Day by Day
A riot call on police radio. "Go to Huntington and Massachusetts avenue." The siren screamed. Traffic jammed before Symphony Hall. Police investigators. Reporters showed their way to the police and waited impatiently for their report. One officer was writing it—and it appeared to be serious. He frowned and looked deeply concerned. His pencil moved—paused—then moved again. It seemed to take him hours. Finally a reporter expressed his impatience.

"Wait a minute, will you?" said the officer. "It's false alarm—and I'm trying to spell 'Symphony'."

A reader, slightly disgruntled, but only for the moment, submits this wailing complaint: "Here it is still long before Christmas and that awful 'Yule' pops up again," he writes. "Only this morning I saw a headline 'Yule Shopping Grows Bigger.' Well, I think that's a perfectly distasteful word and its only excuse for existing is when it's used in such songs as 'Yule Be Sorry Someday' and 'Yule Miss Me When I'm Gone.' Can nothing be done about this condition?"

I'm afraid not, sir, but you make me wish there could be.

Educators In Olympic Protest

Newark, N. J., Dec. 2 (UPI)—Forty leading American educators, embracing presidents of colleges in 27 states, have joined in protest to the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States and the American Olympic committee, calling for the withdrawal of American teams from participation in the 1936 Olympic games if they are held, as scheduled, in Nazi Germany.

Frank Kingdon, president of Dartmouth College, announced the protest for the signatories, revealed that the protest, stated in a letter to the Olympic committee, is "a serious consideration, based upon the record of events which have happened in Germany for the past two and a half years, that the Olympic committee, which has been the center of discrimination against Jews, Catholics, Protestants, and all other groups, is perpetuated in the field of sports and in the Olympic games."

"We believe further that these games are being used by Nazi Germany as an instrument for the propagation of their ideas which represent the destruction of democratic and progressive society."

BOWDOIN, B. U.

"Because the Olympic games are dedicated to the advancement of international unity and the high standards of sportsmanship, and because the Nazi regime is responsible for the enslavement of races and the destruction of fair play, we believe that American athletes should refuse to take part in the games, and that such refusal will serve to preserve and preserve sport and the sporting spirit."

Among the educators who joined in the signing of the protest were: Brother Albert, president of St. Mary's College; President Arlo Brown, President of Wesleyan University; President Tyler Dennett, Williams College; President John F. Dobbs, Pacific University; President G. Erickson, Upsala College; President Frank P. Graham, University of North Carolina; President Raymond Kent, University of Louisville; President Walter L. Linder, Davidson College; President Daniel L. March, Boston University; President Harry W. McPherson, Illinois Wesleyan University; President Edward S. Parsons, Marietta College; President Ellis F. Pendleton, Wake Forest College; President Kenneth C. Miles, Bowdoin College; President Walter C. Treatin, University of Dayton; President Charles C. Tuck, Colby College; President A. G. Williamson, Oklahoma City University; President Mary E. Woolley, Mt. Holyoke College; President Alfred Hume, University of Mississippi; and others.

Bates Prexy Refuses To Join Movement

Lewiston, Me., Dec. 2 (AP)—Dr. Clifford D. Gray, president of Bates College, said today he had refused to join other college heads in requesting withdrawal of the American team from the 1936 Olympic games in Berlin.

"One may disapprove of many things the Nazis do," President Gray said, "but it is a poor way to show one's disapproval to refuse to participate in the Berlin contests, especially where the American Olympic committee has assured the public that the fundamental ideals underlying these games are to be preserved. I do not like to see the Olympic committee used as a club with which to threaten the present German government."

Among American educators who signed a request to the Amateur Athletic Union and the American Olympic Committee for withdrawal from the games was President Kenneth C. Miles of Bowdoin College.

Madigan

To Continue as Gael Coach

MORRIS, Cal. Dec. 2 (INS)—"Are you going to Ferdinand to coach?" Edward Madigan (Nip) Madigan, grid man for St. Mary's College, was asked today.

"No," was the answer. "Are you going to leave St. Mary's for any other school?" Again the reply was, "No," with this qualification, "at least I have no plans at the present for quitting the Gael."

Kerr Safe at Home After Neat Hook Slide

Babe Siebert of the Bruins came down the ice from his defense position like a bolt out of the well-known blue. He signed and sagged his way through the Ranger team in a fancy exhibition of broken field skating and stick handling. It looked like a certain goal. He was well in on Andy Kerr, Ranger goalie, when he wound up. But before he could whang the bloomin' lyre, Kerr took him out of the play with a come-hither block. But Bruins won, nevertheless, 2-0.

Yale News

Issues Warning

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 2 (AP)—The Yale Daily News, warning that the coming weeks may be expected to bring a denunciation from "a vociferous minority" of graduates as a result of the 35 to 7 defeat suffered by the Elis in the Princeton game, expressed opposition today to any major change in the football coaching staff.

With reports current that Raymond W. Ducky Pond will be reappointed head coach within the near future, the undergraduates publication in an editorial congratulated the 1935 eleven and its coaches "on an admirable record as any in the annals of football."

As the weeks pass, the inevitable criticisms, ill-tempered and ignorant, may rise from a mutter to an impressive roar," said the News. "We take this early opportunity, not only of condemning the critics as unqualified but more particularly of expressing our opposition to any major change in the football coaching staff."

The News denounced as ignorant and disloyal "the self-styled Yale supporters" who may criticize the Eli record. It lauded especially the spirit and gameness of the 1935 eleven, which won six of its 1935 games. Army and Dartmouth were the other teams beaten Princeton in last Yale.

KEN DORATY Joins Indians

Cleveland, Dec. 2 (AP)—Manager Harry Holmes of the Cleveland Indians announced today the purchase of Ken Doraty, a 26-year-old pitcher from the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National League. This season Doraty started with the Syracuse Stars on loan from Toronto. Holmes said the purchase price was $2000.

Hippi Moncevic, the Holy Cross tackle, was laid momentarily low from an accidental bootheel.

He was clearly woozy as trainer Bart Sullivan came out with his medical bag and began to stuff smelling capsules under his nose.

Though his eyes were foggy and his nose streaming, Moncevic wanted no attention because, he explained, the radio broadcast would tell about his injury over the ether and he didn't want his mother, who was listening, to worry.

Football Horatius

ONE OF SATURDAY'S ENING heroes was Bill Crowell, 24-year-old referee of the Yale-Princeton game, who stood off a premature goal post assault with his fist and broke a charging graduate as a result of the 35 to 7 defeat suffered by the Elis in the Princeton game, expressed opposition today to any major change in the football coaching staff.

He could pull like a pussy cat, could Wilmer, or he could take off your outside with language that splurged like the lash of a bull whip. He handled his wily pupils in the old days like a patient, competent stevedore foreman handling a sort of stubborn bunnies.

I know why that goalpost mob shivered up and slunk away. I once came head-on in Wilmer while smoking a corncob during the height of football training. And though he spoke no word, the sudden calcium light in the man's eye made me bite the hardwood stem in halves. I broke two teeth.

Some weeks ago when Crowell and I were officials in the Columbia-Michigan game, I asked him why he never mentioned my sin in the days that followed.

"Well," he said, "there are times when silence and the uncertainty of impending punishment are the cruelest penalty there is. I'll be sure you never hear from me again."

I never did.

THE TULANE-LOUISIANA STATE game, which the latter won Saturday by the score of 14 to 6, is not merely a football contest. It is the symbol of all the prejudice and bitter political rivalry that the Huey Long administration engendered.

Tulane champions the anti-Long forces of New Orleans. And Louisiana State, as the paupered plaything of the late Reuther, looks on the game as a form of holy war to vindicate the principles of their sainted leader.

So, anticipating defeat, Tulane students wound the goal posts with live wires fed from buried station batteries. And when the Louisiana scholars suffered the shocks and ripped the standard down, the embattled armies went at each other with knuckles, shoes and whatever hardware weapons were handy. The police stood by while the combatants growl picked each other.

THE DEPARTURE OF NO COLLEGE generation has been hailed with such a candid sense of relief as the passing of Princeton's football club of 1935 by Tiger opponents. 24 came to Princeton as college students when Fritz Crisler arrived to reorganize the football department, and has grown into a legend that will live through the years.

As freshmen they were unbeaten. As varsity sophomores they were undefeated again. As juniors they lost only in an unbelievable upset to Yale. And as seniors they achieved the character of one of the immortal football units of all time.

LEWIS HANEY ON MARKET:

Composite Averages Off 1 and 2 Points

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Dec. 2.—The composite average of the stock market lost between one and two points last week. The broader averages, which contain a large number of stocks, were down only about one point. The railway stocks held well. "Trading" in industrial issues were weakest. Utility stocks sagged gradually, but persistently.

Of the dozen most active stocks, seven lost ground during the week, including steel, motor, utility and a radio issue. On the other hand, five of the most active down were up, including aviation, copper and oil issues.

It is significant that the most active issues as a group were less buoyant than in a long while. A perfect day-to-day trading score made in the most active stocks would have resulted in no gain.

Bonds, however, managed to register a small average advance during the week. And commodity prices probably averaged lower. Evidently the uncertainties, and the temporarily deflationary effects of European possibilities were being weighed. These include war threats and French monetary weakness.

War scares will come and go, but the situation in this respect is incalculable for the near term. It seems to me, however, that the prospective combatants are not ready for conflict. Meanwhile, the prospective "war babies" should be helped, inflationary tendencies be strengthened, and funds transferred to this country remain here.

As to the franc, much would depend upon the kind of action France might take. If she "devalues," and at once revokes on a gold basis, gold would flow into this country. But if she should plunge into "managed currency," a return flow of gold would be doubtful.

Other matters which are being digested by the market are the motor situation and the steel outlook. Evidently, there is less optimism concerning the volume of automobile sales early next year. Obviously, the street was too optimistic about an advance in finished steel prices.

There is, however, no reason yet to doubt that the total volume of automobile business for the 12 months beginning with November will show a gain. Nor is there any reason to doubt that the steel business will hold up, or that steel prices will eventually be marked up if that be desirable.

These considerations, then, make for uncertainty and volatility, but not for liquidation or sustained recession.

On the whole, I would not say that the market action is bad. The general condition is that of inactivity on the advances. There has been no follow through on gains. Buyers hold off, and hold, or take profits on bulges.

But there has been no indication of a downward momentum, and the absence of follow through on the reaction is notable. There has been no ground lost by the averages in the last four trading days.

It seems significant that many stocks have declined just enough to close the gaps of October 14, and to reach the fields.

After all, a quiet and fairly firm market at this point is more reassuring than a continuation of the excited trading and wide markups of a couple of weeks ago.

I would say that at this juncture the strength in the bond market is a distinctly favorable symptom.

Finally, it can be said that business news is on the whole favorable, the recent gain in railway carloadings and the current reports concerning retail trade being encouraging.

That the President should sink to non-bulge tactics in dealing "the masses" against "members of well-stocked clubs, is discouraging, but straw votes are indicating that the majority do not favor his policies.

So, barring news not in sight, I look for no more than further irregularity. I would favor moderate purchase of sound stocks, especially those connected with building, the non-ferrous metals and steels. A quiet and firm market at this point is more reassuring than a continuation of the excited trading and wide markups of a couple of weeks ago.

CHEER in Bond CIRCLES

BOSTON LEADER CITES REASONS

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The men who supply the nation's industries with capital are more cheerful today than in some time, according to Orrin G. Wood, recently elected president of the Investment Bankers Association and partner in the Boston investment house of Eastbrook & Co.

Commenting on this happy state of affairs, the Boston leader indicated that he expected new issues would spring from a variety of sources over the next few months.

He said: "Now that the deadline for registering with the SEC is passed, a hiatus in utility financing is likely, but general expansion and construction could supply the impetus for new financing by a number of industries."

Pointing to new construction by certain leading companies in the heavy industries, he suggested that while it was at present financed out of treasury funds, the line would come when other companies would be pressed to enlarge their facilities and would enter the capital market to obtain the necessary money.

Another development to watch in Wood's opinion, is the growing struggle between low-grade high-grade refunding issues, now on or about to reach the market, and low-grade, high-grade bonds that have been on the market right along.

Refunding

Commenting on this feature, the Boston investor pointed out that enough prices appearing in the cheaper bracket, forced by increasing numbers of buyers desiring to buy low-grade issues, would lead to a new high-grade issue.

Mr. Wood concluded the interview with a few timely words for the average investor. Whether his business man buyer of blocks of bonds or little fellow accustomed to purchase one or two bonds at a time.

In his view, "There are two things all investors should do: first, they should realize that employment of money is not a haphazard affair. Mr. Wood added that for some reason when it came to investment in bonds, many buyers were prone to believe he could tend time matters with a minimum of time.

This is not the case, and painful lessons usually are learned from experience. As the number of bond issues is an attribute that few investors understand, the ages have often claimed.

BILLIONS SPENT BY GOVERNMENT

Payments of Interest Largest

General expenditures of the Federal Government in the 12 months ended June 30, 1935, totaled $3,147,676,385.

This figure does not include the "extraordinary" spending by the government for "recovery and relief," or the sum necessary for public-debt retirements.

The largest item, according to a study by the New York Trust Co., is that of interest payments on the public debt. A total of $520,226,353 was expended to pay for the interest on the largest outstanding debt in our history.

If comparison is made with interest paid on the debt in 1930, the maximum year in the pre-war decade, the increase amounts to almost 3200 per cent.

These interest payments, from the functional point of view, largely represent payments for the cost of war and the cost of the depression. Since the total debt, prior to the increase arising from borrowing for current emergency expenditures, was $5,531,000,000, or approximately half of all general expenditures.

The cost of war in general, however, is a far greater burden than this share of the interest on the public debt. Expenditures for the Veterans' Administration and for national defense must be added to that part of the interest payments and debt to war costs.

The third most important category of expenditures last year comprised those of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The total of $52,000,000 paid out was largely compensated by gross receipts from processing taxes.

If the processing taxes should be declared unconstitutional, they will add very considerably to the direct costs of government, through the immediate burden on the taxpayer.

Total departmental expenditures rose 4 1/2 per cent in 1935 over 1934, as the number of government employees expanded. Military expenditures increased 10 per cent, while Civil Service retirement fund, $1,000,000,000, was added.

BETTER Business Outlook

New Club to Protect Industry

By Universal Service

New York, Dec. 2.—In industries in 26 states have allied themselves with the Made-In-America Club, Inc., it was announced here today at the national executive headquarters.

The club, which has been organized on a non-partisan basis, has for its main objective the defense of American markets against the attacks of unfair foreign competition.

John W. Kieckhefer, president of the Kieckhefer Containers Corporation, has been elected president of the organization. Associated with him as vice-president is J. P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation, Inc., and J. B. Diquie of the United States Distributing Corporation.

Former Ambassador to Germany, Gerard Samuel Crowther, writer on economic and financial subjects, is vice-president of the Elsin National Watch Company, are among the officers of the club.

Members of the club are themselves in the plan of the organization to spread public education on the relations between domestic and foreign markets.

Captain Frank K. Eble, managing director of the American Match Institute, who is contributing his services as supervisor of the club, pointed out today that foreign-made matches are sold in this country at a price of eight cents per dozen, while the price of domestic matches is 10 cents.

American merchandise decreased 350,000 in the first eight months of 1935. Unless American exporters, farmers and wage earners do something to counter the situation, the United States is headed for a depression.

The vicious circle of unemployment, higher taxes and other evils incident to the depression, are domestic markets with products of alien labor, and the club will sponsor cooperative measures of legislation.

"Encouraging the buying public to demand Made-In-America goods is the first essential of any well-considered program that will bring about recovery," the club's literature said.

Literature sent out by the club calls attention to the fact that the United States is the only country in the world that exports more than it imports.

Quotations from the club's literature are as follows: "The United States is the only country in the world that exports more than it imports. The United States is the only country in the world that exports more than it imports."

N. E. MILL

Ready FOR FIGHT in AAA

By Hugh E. Bradshaw
A 28,000 word brief attacking the constitutionality of processing taxes, to be filed with the U. S. Supreme Court, is the answer of the Hoosier Mills of New Bedford to "Raw Deal" legislators.

Five arguments are listed to support its stand.
First—Congress exceeded its limited powers and trespassed upon powers reserved to the states and to the people in authorizing and applying taxes under the AAA.

Second—The processing and floor stock taxes are in violation of the Fifth Amendment.

Third—"Congress may not, under guise of the taxing power, usurp a power not delegated to it by the Constitution."

Fourth—"The floor stock taxes are direct taxes and are void because not apportioned."

Fifth—"The act is invalid in that it delegates legislative power to the Secretary of Agriculture."

Attorneys for the Hoosier Mills, led by George Warton Pepper, insist that the taxes are unconstitutional because they are part of an unconstitutional scheme of forced production. That is the sum and substance of the case as New Englanders see it.

It is the highest court in the land on December 8. On it hinges the fate of those who have been attempting to amend industry in order to promote a recovery scheme. The lines are drawn and the second great battle of the raw deal is on to follow.

Notebook: With the NRA defeat fresh in mind, with various polls showing a trend to conservatism and with hopes regarding AAA running high, the business is getting better. The patient is literally recovering despite the blunders of recovery charlatans. Now all that really needs to be left behind on war talk. And a respite. Which last, incidentally, seems most needed. It is long (though it was about to break the cold front being laid).

Stock prices have drifted off to a quiet, but a nearby technical recovery. That is, all except the low end of the market. Top values for the recovery while according to ideas voiced here and leaves the reaction in position to lead any new upturn. We feel this latter will happen as force and support are gained. A large action in order to intercept the movement without too much delay.

Shore: In all there is five-point upswing in rail shares is not an impossibility in here, although it does look strange after months of quiet. Industrials, while having recovered, are still showing a downward trend. The Dow-Jones index as the spot to watch and the one to follow. All in all, the market while having been called to follow, is all through on the upswing.

STOCK Prices Close HEAVY RETREAT IS ACTIVE

New York, Dec. 2.—After breaking and filling duty throughout the greater part of today's session, the stock market staged a rather active retreat in the final hour.

Brokers reported many of their customers had decided to further the advance pending further news. However, the market was heavy, houses of fractions to around a point, predominating. Grains, marked time, and industrial, bonds were mixed. The market closed with a slight decline.

Among the stock advances, shares were those of Atlantic Coast Line, Norfolk & Western, Norfolk & Southern, Chesapeake & Potomac, and the U. S. Steel. Homecoming Mining dropped points on a single transfer. John Hancock American Tobacco B. Western Union and American Telephone yielded around a point each. The late tone was fairly steady.

The small order and group seemingly reflected predictions of a December business decline. Phillips Petroleum advanced on announcement that $200,000 of new production had been secured.

Phillips Petroleum advanced on announcement that $200,000 of new production had been secured. The company's production for the year ended October 31, 1935, was 1,400,000 barrels, compared with 1,300,000 barrels for the year ended October 31, 1934.

With the national debt passing the $20-billion mark, the report of the Treasury department, which the Treasury announced it would borrow $100,000,000 in the form of a new issue of Treasury bonds, was a blow to the market.

The French franc was 50.4 per cent of parity at the beginning of the year, and it is now 48.5 per cent of parity at the end of the year.

Maine Central Gets Extension

Washington, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission today approved extension to December 31 of a $240,000 reconstruction of the Maine Central Railroad, which was authorized in 1934.

The commission did not act on the road's request for approval of a $240,000 reconstruction of the Maine Central Railroad, which was authorized in 1934.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

GREETINGS! Attention, all you adventurers with the drawn line!

Here is a very fine specimen of pen and ink work, presented to this artist's corner by Joe Mulligan of 186 Arthur Street, Framingham.

Joe doesn't tell us a thing about himself, but we can tell by the delicacy of his work that he is an artist of no mean merit.

Our compliments to you, Joseph, and success with your talent!

The Editor.

Wild Cow Menaces a Gloucester Girl

Lived 100 Years in Second, Annie Barrett Says.

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

"You've all heard the story of the cow that jumped over the moon," says Annie Barrett of 17 Highland street, Gloucester, "but have you heard the one about the cow that jumped over the girl? Well, that's what happened—and I'm the girl!"

Annie says that was the biggest thrill of her whole life. She even goes farther than that. She says nothing possibly could give her a bigger thrill, except possibly winning one of those ten-dollar checks I'm passing out. "Because," she says, "I've never yet won anything in my whole life."

Well, you've won something now, Annie. You'll be getting your ten-dollar check tomorrow, for a very swell story indeed. Pull your chairs up closer, boys and girls. Listen to this yarn of Annie's:

Twelve years ago, when Annie was a girl of sixteen, she lived on a farm at Sours, Prince Edward Island, Canada. Her folks had a big orchard out back of the house, and a neighbor kept a couple of cows there. Also, the Barretts had a little brown dog named Teddy. Remember Teddy. He's an important actor in this little adventure drama that Annie is putting on for us today.

Now about those two cows in the back pasture. One of them was just an ordinary, stolid, easy-going cow. The other one, though—a brown and white one, with a mean eye—was a high-strung, temperamental creature that used to get cranky and start to act up whenever anyone came near her. She had never won any medals for contentedness, and never got her picture on any condensed milk cans.

Annie and all the rest of the kids in the neighborhood usually gave her a wide berth when they were playing in the Barretts' orchard.

Now we get back to the little brown dog, Teddy. Teddy was a high-strung, active animal, too. He thought the neighbor's cows, out there in the orchard, were put there for him to play with. If you didn't watch him close, he'd start a lively rumble up back of the house, barking at the big beasts, snapping at their heels and sending them scotching around the pasture like a couple of antelopes. It was fun for Teddy, but for the two cows there was more panic than pleasure in the proceedings.

Now we've introduced all the animal actors in the cast. It only remains to ring in the human ones—Annie—and the baby.

The baby was a neighbor's child—a little girl, three years old. She used to run away from home once in a while and come over to the Barretts' house for a visit. That's what she was doing on that September day in 1923—the day that Fate had set as the date for Annie's adventure.

Annie saw the little girl toddling across the field and went out to meet her. The baby was in the orchard when Annie caught up with her and took her hand. And just then around the corner of the house came Teddy, the dog, his tail up and his eyes full of mischief. He headed for the corner of the orchard where the two cows were quietly chewing their cud, and in a minute there came a yapping from that corner of the pasture.

Annie looked toward the corner of the pasture and suddenly stopped dead in her tracks. The brown and white cow—the mean one—had broken into a run and was headed in her direction. Behind her was Teddy, snarling and snapping.

Says Annie: "I was so frightened I didn't know what to do. I picked up the baby and made for the door leading into the back porch. As I got to the step, I looked back. And there was the cow—there was Teddy—both of them foaming at the mouth—not three steps behind me, and still headed in my direction."

"I was so cornered that I couldn't go to right or left—only through the porch door. And I knew I could never make that. In another second that cow would be running full tilt into me."

"I was so frightened that I couldn't have moved—even if it would have done any good. I lived a hundred years in that one second—thought of all the things I ever did or planned to do—wondered if baby would be killed as well as I. The thought of the baby decided me. I would protect her as much as I could."

"I had the baby in my arms and, doubling my body over her, crouched down on the ground. Then I shut my eyes and waited for the inevitable."

But the inevitable didn't happen. About everything else did, but not the inevitable. Annie felt a hoof graze her head, and then she heard a crash right in front of her, accompanied by the raucous bawling of a frightened cow. Someone screamed inside the house, and Annie looked up at the darndest sight she had ever seen in her life.

The cow was trying to crawl into the house—or at least, that's the way it looked.

She had jumped clean over Annie and the baby, right through the screen door of the porch, and landed half through a window looking into the house itself.

BOY, WHAT A CLOSE CALL FOR ANNIE!

Annie says she never won anything before in her life, and—well—that's nothing unusual. Plenty of people who have never won even so much as a booby prize are cleaning up on this advertising business. Everybody has had an adventure, so everybody has an even chance. Try it. You'll be surprised. Tomorrow I'll have another great story. And until then—goodbye!
